

Torrance Pictorial

MUTE EVIDENCE of tragedy is seen in the photo above. The driver of the truck crumpled in the gully at the dead end of Hawthorne Blvd. was Donald A. Stallmo, 29, of 1538 Stein-hart Lane, Redondo Beach, who later died in Bay Harbor Hospital. Below is a closeup of disaster as men probe the wreckage.

LOOKING NORTH along the coast line from the Palos Verdes Hills at night gives the illusion of a fairyland stretched as far as the eye can see. Lights and shadows hide the homes, the businesses and the people, but they are there, in their cars, their homes, and walking along the streets. It is an area of dynamic growth, and Torrance is right smack dab in the middle of it.

BILL SCHELL AND CAMERA

Bill Schell, of The Press, is a perceptive man.

Bill has two-way radio in his car. A quick flash sent him to the scene of the crash depicted at left.

Bill is curious about what lies on top of hills, and over valleys. His camera "saw" the night scene above.

A good newsman, he covers his community to get such pictures as those about hospitals at right, and below.

Bill's community is Torrance. We call this page "Torrance Pictorial," by Schell." You'll see more.

sistant chief of staff; Dr. Knutson; Dr. Carlo A. Tabellario, outgoing chief of staff; Dr. Richard A. Sullivan, assistant secretary-treasurer, and Dr. James K. Lees, secretary-treasurer.

THE LONG VIEW of the wrecked truck shows in perspective the distance it tumbled down in the gully. Driver Stallmo, who died later in hospital, leaped from the moving truck just before it left the road. He crashed into a fence head first. The truck went off the embankment, 25 feet in the air, and landed upside down on the canyon side. The fire department was called to prevent a possible fire from liquid nitrogen tank which broke off truck.
